Do NOT ignore Fall Lawn Care and Maintenance?

Often people forget about fall lawn care and maintenance because they feel that the season is over, but fall is actually the most important time of year for seeding and fertilizing. During the cooler months moisture is plentiful so it is easy to build up a thick healthy turf. There are three easy steps that we can take to prepare your lawn for winter, it is also preparation for spring.

Dethatching

Early fall is a good time to dethatch the "brown layer" of dead grass with a rake or dethatching tool. It is important that you do not wait until we have a frost to have this done so plan on thatch removal late August through Early October, especially in the our region, where temperatures can drop quickly.

Reseeding

After thinning out a layer of thatch, we can reseed bare spots with fresh seed and cover it with a thin layer of soil or mulch to keep it moist. Lawn soil stays moist longer this time of year because it does not evaporate as quickly as it does during the hot summer months. We can also plant lawn seed all over your yard and work the seed in with an aeration roller rake which is often used to invigorate soil in your garden; this gets the seed under the soil better than a regular metal rake.

Fertilizing

In the early fall applying fertilizer to your reseeded lawn will encourage fast growth of turf grass. Take advantage of these cooler months, you will be rewarded with a thicker more productive lawn come springtime. Don't let leaves pile up and smother your lawn during winter or chances are you will have compacted, unproductive soil during spring. The safest way to ensure your lawn stays dense and healthy all year around is to not ignore fall lawn care. Call us Today for a Free Estimate!
